

A diagram showing a cross-section of a cell wall with five distinct layers. The layers are labeled with numbers 1 through 5, with lines pointing to each layer. Layer 1 is the outermost thin layer. Layer 2 is a thick, dark layer. Layer 3 is a thin layer with a stippled texture. Layer 4 is a thin, clear layer. Layer 5 is the innermost layer, which is a circle representing the plasma membrane.

Figure 1

[illegible]